

Arches National Park, USA

Mountain Biking

Gliding, Swooping, Cascading

Beside enormous stone pockets

Under magnificent arches

Over bulbous sedimentary layers

Arches adrenalin

Leave the humdrum existence of city-life behind and enter into the magical world of Arches National Park. The crystal blue sky is an exquisite backdrop for the brilliant orange Navajo sandstone that is a ribbon beneath your feet. You'll be mesmerized with geological phenomenon such as the 290 foot "Landscape Arch". When you hear the winds sifting sand throughout the formations you will gain an appreciation for how these micro-particles are responsible for sculpting the mammoth arches throughout this superb National Park. Your trip wouldn't be complete without viewing the incredible "Balancing Rock" - a rock the size of three school buses that is perched 55 feet off of the ground. Arches National Park will leave you exhilarated with the majesty of natural forces.
